Melting The Ice Bridges

Conflict according to the oxford learners dictionary is a situation in which people, groups or countries are involved in a serious disagreement or argument. Most at times, conflict is seen in the wider perspective, example conflict between two countries or armed groups. A misunderstanding between two people is also considered a conflict, there are lots of factors which brings about conflict. Today, there are international conflicts that has been there for centuries but has not been resolved. We mostly come across many conflicts on our path of life and there are many mechanisms use to resolve these everyday conflicts. I share my unforgettable experience of resolving a conflict that seemed to be unsolvable.

I recall going to school on an early Monday morning, I usually went to school early since i was the boy's prefect of my school. I was to supervise my fellow colleague to do their assigned morning duties, as I was climbing the staircase I saw a huge mob of spectators gathered in my class, as I gradually moved up the staircase I heard two familiar voices. To my surprise it was two of my best fighting each other, I was very surprised since it was not of them at all. I asked one of our mates of the cause of the fight and she explained to me it was because of a mathematical problem. I was confused, how can a mathematical problem cause a conflict? I asked myself. later got further explanation that, both were challenging each other's solution to the mathematical question, and it later led to a fight between them.

I could not just stand there but had to construct a mechanism to resolve the conflict so, after series of confrontations both settled, though they had both stop fighting, but I was not happy with how they looked at each other. After many thoughts, I decided to send the math problem to our math tutor, I asked him to solve the problem with all the methods he knew. Fortunately, he solved the with the solutions of both my friends included. As happy as I become, I sent the solution to both my friends and explained to them each other's approach. After they were settled with themselves, I made them face the law. Fighting in class was prohibited and they had to face the law regardless.

conflict from my experience is best when solved early and both parties involved should be pleased with the verdict of the resolver.
