FRIENDSHIP

I have been having problems with my classmates for a long time. The only reason we argue is to prove themselves right and humiliate my group of friends. In my opinion, what they did shows how stupid they are. Not to mention the fact that he slandered and lied to me and my close friends to prove himself right. In fact, not only that, but they also try to pit us against each other and divide us. Seriously ridiculous!

If you have friends like this, end your friendship immediately. This is the best decision. I also had a group of friends with these girls for a while. Their friendship was not because they loved me, but to learn my secrets and then broke them up. I learned this when they unfriended me. I wonder how they had a clear conscience while spreading things that were not about me. What harm did we do to you? Now they are with the girl he was talking to behind his back. I hope he doesn't end up like me. They have spoiled the girl so much that she does not even realize that she is being used. These discussions are currently continuing briefly. I don't want to waste my time arguing with them. It's not worth it. They are the best people in the world when it comes to us. When it suits them, they start fights for no reason. Nonsense. We speak in a normal tone of voice in class with my group of friends. Of all the people in the class, they were disturbed. They asked if they would be quiet, we told them that we were speaking in a very normal tone of voice, then they came to us and started tapping the notebook on the desk, making different sounds, etc. They took actions such as. In short, they tried to disturb us.

The lesson I learned from this friendship. Don't trust everyone too quickly, give it at least 1 year. Otherwise, you may get into trouble with slander and lies like me. But here's the thing: bad is always bad. In other words, even if you give time in 1 year or 5 years, that person will not change. It just matures. This does not change that person's behaviour. Friendship is not a simple thing; Friendship is friendship with someone who trusts you, defends you, cares about you, and does not talk behind your back and slander you.
